

Case Management

Personalized healthcare guidance from healthcare professionals

Case Management professionals provide customers with professional healthcare guidance on a 1:1 basis. Whether a customer is living with a complex disease or has a healthcare question, registered nurses certified in Case Management work directly with the individual and his or her providers to meet health needs through direct communication and the use of available resources to promote quality, cost-effective outcomes.

Common health issues that benefit from Case Management include:

- Newly diagnosed conditions
- Catastrophic injuries/illness
- Cancer
- Organ transplants
- Chronic renal failure
- Liver disorders
- Diabetes with complications

Case Management plays a crucial role in the delivery of healthcare today. Case managers educate and empower employees to take a more active role in their health care, resulting in improved patient understanding and compliance with prescribed treatments. Employees are assured of access to the care they need and enjoy overall health and quality of life. There are benefits for employers as well, including lower medical costs, reduced hospitalization, fewer emergency room visits and less sick time. The result? Enhanced worker productivity.
